NEW FORMS OF ORGANISING

Chairs: D.Sc. (Econ.) Anni Paalumäki & D.Sc. (Econ.) Maija Vähämäki, University of Turku, FI

In the age of digitalization, platform economy, and innovation ecosystems, the nature of organizing work is changing. New ways of working are challenging the old organizational mindsets and structures. Beyond a purely technological phenomenon, the current development affects individuals, organizations and industries globally and locally. What are the new forms of organizing evolving in the new virtual era? How do the roles and responsibilities change within the organizational social structure? What happens to boundaries in and across organizations? How does the virtual world change organizational processes, routines, organizational cultures and identities? What kind of challenges are on leadership and management, and how the new opportunities are created within organizations. How do these organizational transitions take place? What is the role of organizational learning in these processes?

Contributions discussing the multifaceted aspects of new forms of organizing are welcome.
